

In the Balance of Light and Dark

Still from video by Artem Kocharyan for the album 'I.A. Water Reservoir'.

Hi everyone,

Written on the new moon, at the threshold of the Spring Equinox, I share what is quietly unfolding. A new video by Artem Kocharyan accompanies 'I.A. Water Reservoir', my recent vinyl release with Invisible Architecture (with Sajra Xhrs Galarreta), recorded in the vast resonance of an underground cistern. If you wish to support, the album can be acquired via Bandcamp or directly through me. Alongside this, a radio retrospective published by Radio Klangendum opens fragments of our decade-long archive, streamed on the Concertzender.

I also invite you into the after-movie of 'Cycles: Overtones and Glottis Attack', performed at MEM Festival in dialogue with an installation by Richard Serra at the Guggenheim Bilbao, and into upcoming gatherings in Brussels, Nantes, and Aix-en-Provence—spaces where listening becomes a shared, living process.

In Rotterdam, I open a Spring cycle of STEM-VOICE sessions: an experimental choir for those wishing to rediscover the voice, gently, in relation. If this reaches you, you are warmly welcome—to come, to listen, or to connect.

With light and dark in balance, and with care for those navigating fragile times —

Kindly,
Janneke
